The false safety of a hospital or health care setting

Life, as I had known it, changed for me on November 27, 2002. That day my daughter Kaitlyn entered this world. Before that day, I label myself naïve. I thought as many women do—that when you are in a hospital or health care setting cared for by nurses and doctors, that you and your baby are safe. I will tell my story, my daughter's story, my family's and friend's story. I want the world to know that you are never safe leaving the well-being of your child in my friend Kelly's words, "in strangers hands." I wish to educate everyone I can.
