

Why case-control studies showed no association between Sudden Infant Death Syndrome and vaccinations

Valentina A. Soldatenkova, MSc

3282 Walnut St. #C

Los Alamos, NM 87544

Phone: +1 505 661 8078 Fax: +1 505 665 4817

Email: valyusha@mail.com

Abstract

Several case-control studies have frequently been cited to support the notion that vaccinations are not a risk factor of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS). However, their findings are neither confirmed nor refuted by valid comparisons of incidence of SIDS in vaccinated infants to that reported in never vaccinated infants.

© Copyright 2007 Pearblossom Private School, Inc–Publishing Division. All rights reserved.

Keywords: case-control studies, vaccinations, Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS)
